Motivation and topics

Agricultural policies are crucial components of international trade and keep motivating sustained interest in academic research, policy discussion, and popular press. A special issue of International Journal of Agricultural and Food Economics in 2015 will be dedicated to the topics related to Agricultural Policies in International Trade. Although not limited, we strongly encourage submissions from the following areas:

- Evolution of international trade policies
- Impacts of agricultural trade policies
- International trade dynamics
- International price analysis

Abstract should be no longer than 500 words and need to indicate the motivation of the study, the methodology and the expected results.

Abstract on different topics that are inherent with the Special Issue are also welcome. The selected articles will be published in the second issue (April) of 2015 of the IJFAEC. Authors of accepted papers will receive a hardcopy of the Special Issue free of charge.

Authors submitting to the special issue should note the following:

Papers submitted will be subject to a double-blind peer review process.

Accepted articles will be not subject to page charge.

Authors will abide by the copyright agreement of the IJFAEC.

Authors will submit an original research paper that has not previously been published.
